To Whom It May Concern:

When Logan Rath asked me to complete a letter of support for him, I accepted with no hesitation. Logan has proven himself to be a very bright and industrious person who exemplifies the word professional. Logan has outstanding communication and interpersonal skills. During the time that Logan has worked with us at Spencerport, he has generously given his time to come in and work to help prepare my students for college. This speaks volumes about his positive attitude and his passion for teaching.

I first had the privilege of meeting Logan four years ago. I teach a college level Psychology class at Spencerport high school. The course is known as Syracuse University Project Advance (SUPA) Psychology. This is a dual credit course where students have the opportunity to earn three credits in Psychology from Syracuse. Research is an integral part of SUA Psychology. Logan has been generous enough to come to Spencerport high school and work with my students. He has come in on numerous occasions to teach to my SUPA classes how use a database and how to document sources using APA format. Logan has consistently taught my students these skills in a way that students can easily comprehend. His knowledge of Library Science is nothing short of impressive. He has extended opportunities to my students to come to SUNY Brockport to use the multiple resources that the library at SUNY Brockport has to offer.

Logan has brilliantly shown his knowledge and his expertise of his profession as an Instruction Librarian. His ability to work with both students and staff is commendable. His willingness to bring his instruction to Spencerport is also noteworthy. Logan shows genuine enthusiasm about his teaching. His knowledge of his profession and his experience in the field are extremely evident. He does a wonderful job of linking the material to the "real world" and of explaining why what he is teaching is important. Logan has a multitude of innovative and creative teaching ideas. These ideas were very refreshing and well worth notice. He has given me fresh new perspectives on ways to make education better for both the teacher and the student. Logan's ambition and dedication help to make him a consummate professional. He genuinely wants those he comes in contact with to become better and more comfortable in regards to his craft. A strong work ethic, a mature and professional demeanor, and a dedication to the success of all are just some of many outstanding qualities that Logan possesses.
